Kaylor Is Centennial Historian

Founding Fathers Overcame Indifference to Education

By Ron Berkehimer

EARL KAYLOR has been commissioned to write the Centennial history of Juniata College.

It would be difficult to find anyone who is better prepared for the task. Dr. Earl C. Kaylor, Jr., is a 1946 graduate of Juniata and has taught at his alma mater for the past 17 years. An ordained Church of the Brethren minister, he presently holds a Charles A. Dana supported professorial chair in history and religion.

In the past, he has served at various times as chairman of the Department of Religion and of the Division of Humanities, director of Summer Sessions, faculty advisor to Student Government, baseball coach and acting director of athletics.

He also held the Mary S. Geiger chair in religion for six years and was the recipient of the Donovan R. Beachley Distinguished Teaching Award in 1972.

Born in Greensburg, Pa., he majored in religion and history as an undergraduate, lettered in baseball and basketball, served as student athletic director and as sports editor of the student weekly.

Later, he played semi-pro baseball in Pittsburgh and amateur ball in the City League in Huntingdon. He remains an avid fisherman and hunter.

Following his graduation from Juniata, he went on to earn the bachelor of divinity degree (1949) at Bethany Theological Seminary in Chicago, the M.A. in history (1951) at Notre Dame, and the Ph.D. in American social and intellectual history (1963) at Penn State. His dissertation dealt with "The Prohibition Movement in Pennsylvania, 1865-1920."

He was pastor of the Westmont Church of the Brethren in Johnstown, Pa., for five years before he returned to Juniata as an assistant professor of Biblical studies in 1958. In addition, he has served the James Creek and Ardenheim churches near Huntingdon and he was interim pastor of the Stone Church on the Juniata campus in 1959.

A member of the American and Pennsylvania Historical Associations, he has authored several biographical studies for the multi-volume work, Notable American Women, 1607-1950, a publication of the Harvard University Press.

Several years ago, Dr. Kaylor was commissioned to write an interpretative history of the Church of the Brethren in central Pennsylvania. The research he has been doing in this subject also is helping him to write his history of the College. Juniata was founded by several members of the Church of the Brethren who had to combat a strong anti-educational sentiment which was prevalent then within the church.

In the first chapter of his history of the College, he writes:

"The Brethren of the past century were notorious for their stubborn indifference to higher education, a circumstance directly related to their traditional way of life. They were a simple and 'peculiar' people, whose religious heritage — the product of a Pietiste-Anabaptist synthesis — derived from German ancestors who migrated to Penn's Province in the 1720's, the victims of persecution."

"Later generations of Brethren pioneered and followed the shifting frontier to settle together in little Dunker colonies, neighboring with their kind. ('Dunker,' or 'Dunkard,' was a popular nickname for the Brethren, an English corruption of the German word 'to baptize by immersion.') Dunkers, until the late 1800s, stayed on the farm or lived in rural villages, distrustful of the city. Some became storekeepers or learned a trade, but few entered the professions."

"Their life-style, typical of kindred sects among the Pennsylvania Dutch, cherished such values as non-conformity, nonresistance, refusal to go to court or to take judicial oaths, frugality, plain speech and dress . . ."

"From colonial times, therefore, the Brethren, unsophisticated and uneasy with distinctions or rank and title — everybody was either 'brother' or 'sister' — had manifested a deep-seated prejudice against an educated ministry. Originally, it had been the need for a trained clergy that had spurred the wholesale founding of small denominational colleges during the first half of the 19th century. But not so with the sectarian Brethren; they refused to place any confidence in education or in a learned leadership. New Testament literalists, they naively argued that if learning was so important Jesus would have chosen some educated men for disciples and the Apostle Paul would have founded schools along with churches . . ."

Instead, the Brethren operated under a system called the "free ministry" in which part-time preachers were elected from among the ranks of the laity, receiving no salary.

However, a handful of men within the sect realized the need for education and waged a tireless campaign for the establishment of Brethren schools. They contended that the lack of educational opportunity was prompting talented

Drs. Doyle and Schlegel Have Set Examples of Dedication

By CHARLIE POLLOCK

Two veteran faculty members who have set examples of dedicated scholarship for thousands of Juniata students are retiring this spring.

Drs. Esther M. Doyle, a Charles A. Dana Supported Professor of English, and Miriam Schlegel Musselman, Martin G. Brumbaugh Professor of Education, have served the College for a total of 55 years. They will be missed in measures beyond expression with words.

Dr. Doyle came to Juniata in 1945, having earned her bachelor's degree at Emerson College and the master of arts degree at Boston University. She has studied further at Denver University, where she served as a teaching assistant, and would later add to her sizeable knowledge at Harvard University, Boston University, Union Theological Seminary, and the University of Maine. She would earn her Ph.D. degree from Northwestern University in 1964.

Dr. Doyle had taught in public schools and private speech studios in Massachusetts and New York state, and was already a veteran of numerous summer stock, college and community theatre productions. She had also served as a counselor at Girl Scout and YWCA camps, and as a Red Cross recreation worker at two Army hospitals.

Having worked with the likes of Margaret Webster (at the famed Brattle Theatre in Cambridge, Mass., where she helped prepare Paul Robeson's Othello), Dr. Doyle became "a missionary of culture in the hills of central Pennsylvania," according to one early tribute. She directed productions for Juniata's Masque through 1959, and was one of many faculty members active in the Huntingdon Community Theatre.

One of the country's leading exponents of oral interpretation, in which she earned her degrees, Dr. Doyle became widely-known — and very much-travelled — for her work with that form. Stressing the performer's voice as opposed to elaborate scenery and staging, she sought to let her audience focus attention on the playwright's words. For more than a decade she toured the country as a visiting professor for the arts program of the American Association of Colleges, appearing in at least a dozen states from Massachusetts to Tennessee and Arkansas to Minnesota.

For several summers in the '60s, Dr. Doyle directed productions for the Kaleidoscope Players, now the official state theatre of New Mexico. The Players, who appeared on campus in December,

Drs. Doyle and (Schlegel) Musselman were organized in 1959 by William S. Fegan '48, one of Dr. Doyle's first Juniata students. Fegan, who received the honorary doctor of letters degree from Juniata in 1972, is still director of the group.

Dr. Doyle also taught by invitation, during those summers, at the Institute for Advanced Study in English at the University of Arizona.

Continuing her "missionary voyages," Dr. Doyle was named, in 1970, a Senior Humanist of the National Humanities Series sponsored by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation. In that capacity she toured again with interpretive readings from "A Man For All Seasons" and other works. Last month she presented a program of readings, "The Pleasure of Their Company," in the Shoemaker Galleries on campus.

Presently chairman of the English Department, Dr. Doyle has held several fellowships and scholarships and the J. Downey Benedict Chair in English. She and Dr. Virginia H. Floyd, professor of speech at Arizona, edited a collection of essays entitled "Studies in Interpretation," Volume I of which was published in 1972. They are currently completing Vol. II, on which Dr. Doyle continued work on her leave of absence this fall. On leave she also studied at the Centre Mediterranean d'Etudes Francaises.

Cited for professional achievement last spring at the College's first annual Breakfast to Honor Women, Dr. Doyle was also honored one year before. She received, at commencement exercises, the sixth annual Beachley Distinguished Professor Award.

President Stauffer, in announcing the award, captured the feeling of all who have known the recipient: "Dr. Doyle has been a leader and significant contributor to the work of the Juniata faculty for nearly three decades. She has been both helper and hero to her students. As teacher, as dramatic coach, and through her own remarkable capacity for oral interpretation, she has given life to our literary heritage. She is an excellent model of the ideal teacher-scholar."

Dr. Miriam Musselman (nee Schlegel), who plans to live in Quarryville, Lancaster County, after retiring, married Stanley Musselman in December. Dr. Calvert N. Ellis '23, president emeritus, was the officiating clergyman.

Dr. Musselman joined the Juniata faculty in 1950, having taught at several elementary schools in Pennsylvania, having served as a WAVES communications officer, and having taught grades 3-6 at the Cairo American School in Cairo, Egypt.

A graduate of Shippensburg State College, she had just received the master of science degree in Elementary Supervision from the University of Pennsylvania. She had studied at the University of London, and would later continue at the Pennsylvania State University and the George Peabody College for Teachers, in Nashville, Tenn. She received the doctor of education degree from Peabody in 1962.

A native of Millersburg, Dauphin County, Dr. Musselman has held the Brumbaugh Professorship since 1963. She has also been chairman of the College's Department of Education and authored, in 1963, "Meet Your Student Teacher: A Handbook for Cooperating Teachers."

In 1966 and 1968, Dr. Musselman was appointed by the Pennsylvania Department of Higher Education, Office of Public Instruction, to task forces studying "an imposing array of student teaching problems" (1966) and developing guidelines for student teaching (1968). She has also served on evaluating teams for the Department of Public Instruction.

An avid traveller, Dr. Musselman has visited Mexico, Italy, Switzerland, France, Palestine, Syria, Lebanon, England and Scotland. For the 1966-67 academic year, she served as director of Brethren Students Abroad, the popular program allowing students to study in Germany, France or Spain during their junior years. Juniata cooperates in the program with five other colleges associated with the Church of the Brethren.

Never one to succumb to "the dogmas of the quiet past," as she once quoted Abraham Lincoln, Dr. Musselman took a sabbatical leave in the spring of 1972 to study new elementary school programs in the Newark, Del., school district.

The Lincoln reference, which goes on to read "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present . . . we must think anew and act anew," was made with foresight in March, 1960, when Dr. Musselman wrote the feature article for the Pennsylvania School Journal. The article, entitled "Today's Schools, Tomorrow's World," included the challenge:

"As teachers and parents we must find ways to first open our own minds to the possibilities of a new, different and better world. We must dream 'big'; we must be willing to examine goals and make sure they aren't outdated models. We must make sure our schools are going somewhere, not just out of habit circling around in the same old rut."

For thousands of Juniata students, Drs. Doyle and Musselman have met that challenge, opening minds to possibilities, dreaming and doing "big" things, and assuring that the College has been — and will continue — "going somewhere."

Four Alumni Elected to Board of Trustees

Four alumni were elected recently to the Board of Trustees of the College. They are Earl D. Croner '38, Laura B. Waltz '42, Willard H. Kimmel '37 and Jack E. Oller '23.

Croner, Kimmel and Oller were elected for regular three-year terms. Mrs. Waltz, who becomes the third woman on the present board, will serve for the remaining two years of an unexpired term.

Members are elected by the Board of Trustees. Kimmel, who joined the board in 1971, was re-elected. He is the owner of a large farm near Shelocta, Pa., producing primarily beef and corn. Active in various agricultural associations, he is a former member of the federally appointed Pennsylvania Agricultural Committee and a former director of Agway and the Pennsylvania Egg and Poultry Producers Association. In addition, he is presently a director of the Elderton State Bank and the Armstrong County Branch of the Farm and Home Association. He and his wife, the former Evelyn Judson, have five children.

Mrs. Waltz, the former Laura Beach, teaches history at the Germantown Friends School and has served several terms on the Board of Christian Education, Atlantic-Northeast District, Church of the Brethren. She is the wife of Benjamin F. Waltz '41, a consultant for a New York publishing firm.

Kimmel and Mrs. Waltz were nominated for board membership by districts of the Church of the Brethren. There are three church-nominated trustees among 30 board members. Croner and Oller were nominated by the board's nominating committee.

Croner is the owner of Croner, Inc., a coal-mining firm in Berlin, Somerset County, and co-owner of the Beachdale Farms near Berlin. In addition, he is president of the National Bank of Western Pennsylvania and a board member of the Johnstown Area Economic Development Corp. He formerly served on the Somerset County Planning Commission and the Advisory Committee of the Somerset County Vocational Technical School. Before he joined the Board of Trustees, he also was a member of the President's Development Council at Juniata. He is married to the former Barbara Miller. They have two sons: Jeffrey '71 and Gregory.

Oller, professor emeritus of French and director of the Foreign Language Laboratory, retired in 1965 after 38 years on the Juniata faculty. He coached basketball and golf at the College for a number of years and has been associated for more than 25 years with the Weimer-Oller Travel Agency in Huntingdon. He is married to the former Betty Rohrbaugh '23.

He replaces his brother, Jefford F. Oller '18, who died last summer, on the Board of Trustees. Their grandfather, Jacob F. Oller, served on Juniata's first permanent board, formed in 1879, and their father, Joseph J. Oller, also was a board member.

CLASS NOTES

By Chris Umble '74

1912

EDITOR'S NOTE: We thought the following letter from HARRY W. ROHRER '12 was so interesting that we requested his permission to print it.

Dear Editor:

I review with interest the various issues of the Juniata College Bulletin. I am pleased to note that our College is moving right along.

In the section "Class Notes," I see that the earliest date indicated is 1924. Whether or not you want to make note of it, 1912 here speaks: I am enjoying the experiences of my 93rd year, tending front and back yards, gardening a plot approximately 750 feet square, and tending a rose garden of about two dozen bushes; my rototiller, hoe and shovel still work real well. Just one crop from the garden this summer was 21 cups (shelled) Dixie Butter Peas, (Baby Limas).

I am enjoying actively serving as a deacon in the First Baptist Church of Decatur, with 3700 members, and listening to some mighty fine sermons by a driving, forward-looking pastor.

Sincerely,

H. W. Rohrer

young people to leave the church.

Among the proponents of education were Dr. Andrew B. Brumbaugh, a physician, and his cousins, Henry and John, printers and publishers of a church periodical called The Pilgrim. They engaged Jacob M. Zuck to conduct classes in a small room on the second floor of the printing shop and magazine office. Dr. Kaylor's description of the opening of the "Huntingdon Normal Select School" on April 17, 1876, follows:

"Jacob Zuck arrived in Huntingdon four days before classes were scheduled to begin. He settled into a one-room apartment, rented for him by John Brumbaugh, directly across the street from the Pilgrim building. Only three students greeted him on Monday, April 17, instead of the expected 15 or 20. All were from the local area — two girls, Rebecca Cornelius and Maggie Miller, and one boy, Gaius Brumbaugh, Dr. A. B.'s 14-year-old son. The teacher refused to open a book the first morning until after he had led his little troupe to the first-floor chapel, where the four of them knelt together in prayer."

"The nation's economy was still reeling from the effects of the 1873 'crash' when Zuck, a man of 'medium height, delicate and slender figure . . .

lustrous brown eyes, dark hair and beard,' began teaching that 'experimental term.'"

Within three years, enrollment had risen to 69 and the school, which had acquired the more grandiose title of Brethren's Normal School and Collegiate Institute, moved to the present location of the College on the west side of town.

It was not the first attempt to start a Brethren school. Others had been conducted for a time in Ohio and Indiana, as well as Pennsylvania. But it was the first to last, so that Juniata today has the distinction of being the oldest Brethren college in the nation.

Actually, the College was never really an official arm of the church. At the Annual Meeting of the elders in 1858, a statement had been adopted saying that the church had "no right to interfere" in the efforts of individual members to found schools "so long as there is no departure from Gospel principles." Dr. Kaylor observes that as a consequence there was "a strict hands-off financial policy toward all school ventures, giving them a genuinely independent status."

Later, in the 1890s it is true, the Brotherhood did lay claim to certain monitorial powers over Brethren colleges, but there was no way it could effectively coerce or penalize any college whose teachings it deemed doctrinally culpable."

Dr. Kaylor also has noted that the Middle Pennsylvania District is now one of the most progressive in the Church of the Brethren and he believes that Juniata's founders and the College itself have obviously contributed to these progressive views.

Striving for readability, he is making his book "anecdotal, even to the point of reconstructing some probable conversations." He also wants to dwell more on personalities than previous histories of the College.

"I've tried to show that the founders were remarkable men, and they really were," he said, "but they were also human."

Dr. Kaylor had completed five of 11 projected chapters when the February edition of The Bulletin went to press. His book will deal with Juniata's entire first century, concluding in 1976. It will be the third historical work about the College. The others were David Emmert's Reminiscences of Juniata College, published in 1901, and Charles C. Ellis' Seventy Years of Juniata College, written in 1947 as the College prepared for its diamond anniversary four years later.

Sterling College Selects Schoenherr as President

Dr. Charles W. Schoenherr, former dean of students at Juniata, will assume the presidency of Sterling College in Kansas prior to July 1.

Having served since last April as vice president for campus affairs at Sterling, Dr. Schoenherr will succeed Dr. Robert C. Baptista as president.

Jerome Chandler, chairman of Sterling's Board of Trustees, announced Dr. Schoenherr's elevation to the presidency and remarked that the board "conducted an extremely comprehensive presidential search from which Dr. Schoenherr emerged as the prime candidate. He was the unanimous choice of the board and we are delighted that he has accepted the offer to become the sixth president of Sterling College."

Dr. Schoenherr was dean of students at Juniata from 1966 until 1972 when he became vice president and dean of Mackinac (Mich.) College.

Before he came to Juniata, he had taught for three years at Northwestern University and served for 13 years as an instructor and administrator at Wheaton (Ill.) College, his alma mater. He holds a master's degree in counseling psychology from Northwestern and a doctorate in higher education from Columbia University.

FACES OF SWIGART HALL

Purchased in 1950 with a gift of $28,000 from the late W. Emmert Swigart '06, a Huntingdon insurance executive, Swigart Hall now houses Juniata's Department of Music. Since it was acquired by the College, the two-story brick structure has been extensively renovated and refurbished with additional gifts from the Swigart family.

The Swigarts have played a prominent role in Juniata's history. W. Emmert Swigart's father, W. J. Swigart, was one of the earliest trustees and served on the board from 1878 to 1939. He was president of the board from 1880 to 1920 and also taught at the College.

W. Emmert Swigart was an active alumnus and a president of the Alumni Association. Two sons and three daughters studied at Juniata — John W. Swigart, Sr. '30, William E. Swigart, Jr. '37, Dorothy Swigart Weikert '34, Naomi Swigart Miller '42 and Martha Swigart Sower '45.

John W. Swigart, Sr., currently serves as secretary and treasurer of the Board of Trustees and one of his sons, Charles B. Swigart '65, is president of the Huntingdon Area Alumni Club. William E. Swigart, Jr. is a member of both the Alumni Council Advisory Committee and the President's Development Council. In addition, he is serving as chairman of the Juniata Valley campaign of the Centennial Fund. Several other members of the family also have attended Juniata and have been active alumni.

The building now known as Swigart Hall was constructed in 1921 as a residence for the Rev. John H. Cassady '06 and his wife, the former Meribah L. Idleman, '02. It was later sold to the "Huntingdon Home for Orphan and Friendless Children" which had been located for some 40 years in a building at the site of the present Cloisters dormitory. The home was forced to move when the Cloisters was built in 1926.

When the orphanage was closed, the building was purchased by Francis McSherry, president of the J. C. Blair Co. in Huntingdon, manufacturers of paper products. The McSherry family lived in the building until it was purchased for the College.

The photographs on this page show two exterior views of Swigart Hall (top), the parlor-recital hall and a basement classroom (center), and the building as it appeared in 1951 (bottom right).

Committee Appointed for Juniata Centennial

Thirty-eight persons have been appointed to serve on the General Committee for the Juniata College Centennial Observances. The blue ribbon committee is headed by Dr. John C. Baker '17, honorary chairman, and President John N. Stauffer '36, chairman.

Among the committee members are a number of distinguished alumni, several of whom also serve on the Board of Trustees, and faculty members, administrators and students. Dr. Baker is chairman of the Board of Trustees.

The committee has been asked "to plan, conduct and insure the success of events, concerts, exhibits and other appropriate means for observing the Centennial Year of Juniata College" in 1975-76.

Numerous suggestions for such events have been submitted to the committee. Moreover, a good deal of work already has been done on some of the Centennial projects. For example, Dr. Earl C. Kaylor, Jr. '46, Charles A. Dana Supported Professor of History and Religion, has completed several chapters of a new history of the College.

Members of the Centennial committee, in addition to Dr. Baker and President Stauffer, are:

Robert C. Baker '21, a member of the Board of Trustees; Eugene C. Baten '63, president of the Philadelphia Alumni Club; Harold B. Brumbaugh '33, vice president for college relations; Isabelle N. Caulton '29, co-chairman of the Centennial Fund alumni campaign; Elizabeth E. Cherry, assistant professor of history; Ralph B. Church, associate professor of English; Edith Hartman Cutrell '27, Board of Trustees; D. Bruce Davis '65, assistant professor of English; Dr. Calvert N. Ellis '23, president emeritus; Charles C. Ellis '40, Board of Trustees and general chairman of the Centennial Fund; Rebecca A. Finkle '76; Attorney John R. Gibbel '61, President's Development Council; Carl D. Glaeser '76, president of Student Government; Dr. J. Glenn Gray '36, professor of philosophy at Colorado College.

Dr. George C. Griffith '21, widely known expert on cardiovascular diseases and honorary vice chairman of the Centennial Fund; Bruce A. Hirsch, associate professor of music; Attorney C. Jewett Henry '29, Board of Trustees; Dr. Kaylor; Karl K. Kindig, Root-Tilden Scholar at the New York University School of Law; Dr. Klaus Kipphan, associate professor of history; Janet Mercincavage '76; Margaret A. Meyer '76; Blaise A. Michaels '76; Dr. Leland W. Miles '46, president of the University of Bridgeport; the Rev. M. Andrew Murray, campus minister; Dr. Wilfred G. Norris '54, provost; Clayton N. Pheasant '65, director of alumni affairs; Paul M. Robinson '35, Board of Trustees; Marsha L. Rowland '76; Sam A. Sirianni '76; John W. Swigart '30, secretary and treasurer of the Board of Trustees; Michael A. Trim '76; Foster G. Ulrich, Jr., executive director of development; Dr. Robert E. Wagoner, professor of philosophy, and Debra J. Ziegler '76.

Leaders Announced For Fund Campaigns

Glenn F. Williams '29, Attorney Marion D. Patterson, Jr., and G. William Ward are filling key assignments in fund-raising efforts for Juniata.

Williams, a special agent for the Prudential Insurance Co., is serving as chairman of the 1974-75 Annual Support Fund. The goal for the fund is to raise $130,000 by June 30 as a supplement to current operating monies.

At the end of January, contributions to the Annual Sport Fund were keeping pace with last year when the goal of $130,000 was achieved. This is encouraging since Juniata also is in the midst of its Centennial Fund drive, designed to raise $5 million by 1976 when the College celebrates its 100th anniversary.

Attorney Patterson is chairing the Parents effort of the Centennial Fund and Ward is heading the Friends campaign. These two segments of the overall Centennial Fund solicitation have goals of $50,000 and $225,000, respectively.

Total gifts and pledges to the Centennial Fund

Glenn Williams

Marion Patterson

G. William Ward

recently topped the $2.5-million mark. All contributions to the Centennial Fund will be added to Juniata's endowment.

Williams, who resides in Altoona, has served his alma mater in numerous capacities and is currently a member of the President's Development Council.

Patterson, a graduate of The Hill School in Pottstown and the University of Pennsylvania, is the senior partner in the firm of Patterson, Evey, Rouch & Black in Hollidaysburg. His son, Dean, is a member of the junior class.

Ward, president of the Ward Trucking Corp. of Altoona, is a graduate of Mercersburg Academy and the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Finance and Commerce. He also serves on the President's Development Council.

"Juniata is very fortunate in having three men of such caliber serving in these important leadership positions," President Stauffer remarked.

Donaldson Joins Planning Commission

James R. Donaldson '67 has agreed to serve as the alumni representative on the Commission to Plan for Juniata's Future.

Donaldson, an executive for an automobile parts firm, replaces Dr. John T. Yates, Jr. '56 on the commission. Dr. Yates, who has served on the commission since it was formed in the summer of 1973, resigned because of his increasingly busy professional schedule. A research chemist with the National Bureau of Standards, he has been traveling extensively in recent months.

Established by the Board of Trustees, the commission "is charged with responsibility for systematic analysis of all pertinent and ascertainable factors relating to the future of Juniata College."

The commission will submit a report to the board in 1976, the year in which Juniata celebrates its Centennial. The report will suggest "courses of action for the College in her second century of service."

Included on the nine-member commission are representatives of the faculty, the alumni, the trustees, the student body and the community. President John N. Stauffer '36, Dr. Wilfred G. Norris '54, provost, and William R. Alexander '66, director of institutional research, also serve on the commission as resource persons. In addition, Alexander is the executive officer of the commission.

Donaldson moved from Akron to Toledo last fall to accept a position as manager of marketing analysis and planning for the A.P. Parts Co., manufacturers of automobile exhaust equipment and shock absorbers. He had formerly been manager of planning services for the Leslie-Lock Building Products Co. Both A.P. Parts and Leslie-Lock are divisions of the Questor Corp.

He also has served as a class fund agent for three years and is vice chairman of the Annual Support Fund. He will be the chairman in 1975-76.

W. Newton Long Served As Trustee for 48 Years

Dr. W. Newton Long, a member of Juniata's Board of Trustees for 48 years, died Saturday, Jan. 25, at the age of 84.

"Newton was one of the all-time great trustees in Juniata's history, his service in this capacity extending from 1922 until he was retired at his own request in 1970," President Stauffer said. "At that time, the Board of Trustees honored Newton by naming him an emeritus trustee. His wisdom and his generosity have added immeasurably to Juniata's quality and stature."

Dr. Long chaired the board during the 1959-60 academic year and in 1958 received the honorary doctor of divinity degree from Juniata. This degree usually is given to clergymen, but Dr. Long, as a layman, served the Church of the Brethren in numerous capacities. He was active in local, regional and national bodies of the church and played a major part in establishing five congregations in the Baltimore area.

The Long House, one of four units in the East Houses named for distinguished trustees, was named for Dr. Long in 1970. Boonsboro, Md., three years ago.

Dr. Long founded the Miller Chemical and Fertilizer Co. in 1936 and was its board chairman for many years. He had previously been treasurer of the Central Chemical Co. in Hagerstown, Md., and when Central was purchased by the Davison Chemical Co. of Baltimore, he became sales manager of Davison.

In addition, Dr. Long was a director of the Chamber of Commerce and the First National Bank in Hagerstown and the National Fertilizer Association. He was a trustee of the Fahrney-Keedy Home and a member of the Pocket Testament League in Baltimore.

He is survived by his widow, two sons (Drs. W. Newton Long, Jr. '40 of Atlanta, Ga., and Howard F. Long '50 of Baltimore) and six grandchildren. Two of the grandchildren (Rebecca '75 and Michael '77) are presently attending Juniata.

The Long family has contributed generously to various agencies of the church and to Juniata.

President John N. Stauffer '36 reviews the results of the 34 regional alumni campaigns with campaign leaders. The alumni portion of the Juniata Centennial Fund has passed the $200,000 mark. Seventy-six per cent of all alumni invited to participate in the campaign responded with a contribution or pledge. Seated, left to right, are Cy and Isabelle Caulton '29, alumni campaign chairmen; Shirley D. Lingenfelter '55, president of the Alumni Association, and William N. Maclay '47, division chairman. Standing are Charles C. Brown '59, division chairman; President Stauffer and Richard L. Dodge '57, division chairman.

Athletes Help to Direct Drive for Cordova Fund

By CHARLIE POLLOCK

In a time when collegiate athletics — and often colleges and students themselves — have received much harsh and sometimes warranted criticism, fans and friends of Juniata take continued pride in what they've been able to see: sport in its finest competitive fashion, yet sport where the ends remain in perspective, where the means remain a valuable part of the educational process.

At all times, character has retained its important position as part of playing the game — any game — and has stayed with Indian athletes off the field. The qualities that have led to sharing and sacrifice on gridiron, diamond, court or track carry over into classroom and life.

At no time, however, has the point been made with more clarity than this winter. On November 11, the home of W. Stephen Cordova, a Juniata junior from Altoona, was destroyed in a tragic fire. Cordova, the oldest of seven remaining children, lost his mother and two sisters in the blaze.

A member of the Juniata Senate and a former Indian basketball player, Cordova was left as brother and father to six homeless sisters, ranging in age from six to 18.

Campaigns to provide assistance were begun immediately, including the collection of clothing both in Altoona and on College Hill. Moreover, Juniata students also started a drive to establish a Cordova Fund.

The fund, which has a goal of $5000, is chaired by juniors Carl Glaeser, Manchester, Md., and Donald Williams, Pittsburgh, and sophomore Greg Ransom, Chambersburg. All three are active in campus affairs, with Glaeser serving as Student Government president this year.

Williams and Ransom, however, are better known for their exploits as Indian athletes. In fact, they were named the most valuable basketball player and cross country runner, respectively, at last spring's all-sports banquet.

According to the three co-chairmen, the Cordova Fund had raised some $1,700 by the first of the year, drawing primarily from student contributions. Appeals also were written to mail to the parents of students from Blair, Huntingdon and Bedford Counties, to churches in surrounding communities, and to the members of Juniata's Board of Trustees.

A trust fund will be established at the Union National Bank and Trust Co. in Huntingdon. With the approval of an advisory committee and the bank, Cordova will be able to draw on the interest and principle of the trust as funds are needed to meet the expenses of the family. When the youngest of the children, six-year-old Amy, reaches her 18th birthday, anything remaining in the account will be divided among the family members.

Glaeser, a good high school athlete, has devoted time at Juniata to the Task Force on Governance and the National Student Lobby. In addition, he helped organize the Pennsylvania Student Lobby, which met on campus last spring. Williams also is a member of the Student Senate and has been active in Juniata's admissions program as well.

Williams has been the basketball team's leading scorer and rebounder for the past two years. He was the Eastern College Athletic Conference Rookie of the Year (Division III) in 1973 and a first-team selection on the Middle Atlantic Conference All-Northern Section squad last season. Already ranked among the five leading scorers in Juniata basketball history, he passed the 1,000 mark in career scoring last month. Moreover, he is fourth among Juniata's career rebounding leaders and holds the record (303) for caroms in one campaign. This year he also has contributed some fine defensive play and is second on the team in assists. His all-round development, plus that of the rest of the team under new head coach Carl Meditch, enabled the Indians to get off to one of their best starts in many years. They won five of their first seven games and finished second in the Shrine-Muskingum Holiday Tournament, losing in the finals to host Muskingum, 64-62, after topping DePauw, 64-58, in the opening round.

Ransom was the cross country team's top finisher in all but one meet during his freshman season (1973), leading Juniata to a 7-4 record and its first winning mark since 1963. During the past fall, he helped Juniata to a 9-2 record and a third-place finish among 20 teams in the MAC championship meet. He also placed eighth as a freshman and seventh last fall in the individual competition at the MAC championships.

The team had better balance in 1974 and Ransom finished first for the Indians twice, second five times, third three times and fourth once. Among both teams, he logged two firsts, four seconds and three thirds to again compile Juniata's best individual record.

Two of Juniata's finest athletes, Williams and Ransom have made contributions off the field as well. The Cordova family will attest to that.

'Long-Distance' Lentini Collects Numerous Honors

Pete Lentini . . . Juniata's most-honored gridder since Dandy Don Weiss.

Just before last season began, football coach Walt Nadzak felt his senior tight end, Peter Lentini, "could be THE big man this year. He could be our biggest offensive threat — he's surely got all the tools."

Four months later, within the course of several post-season weeks, the various voters for all-star squads seemed convinced. They named Lentini to four separate teams, making the speedy Kulpmont native Juniata's most-honored gridder since Dandy Don Weiss.

Lentini, nicknamed "Long Distance," gained honorable mention on the AP College Division All-America team, joining players from both the nation's Division II and III schools. He also picked up a first-team berth on the ECAC All-East Division III team, and a second-team berth on the AP All-Pennsylvania squad. He lost his first-team all-state bid only to Penn State's Dan Natale.

In addition, Lentini was named the most valuable player in the Middle Atlantic Conference Northern Section, following fullback Lou Eckerl's selection for 1973. Lentini had led the section in scoring and receiving.

Not since 1968, when quarterback Weiss and fullback Jim Hartland both earned honorable mention, had Juniata placed a man on the Little All-American squad. Not since 1967, when Weiss was first-team All-East, had an Indian gained a spot on both the All-East and All-American rosters.

An accounting major out of Mt. Carmel High School, Lentini needed an accountant's skills to tab his statistics this season. In leading the Tribe to a 7-2 log (5-1 in the MAC), he picked up 616 yards and eight TDs receiving. He averaged almost 23 yards per catch, and finished third on the Indian list for all-time touchdown receptions (14). In his largely two-year career, he gained 1086 yards receiving, fourth-best effort ever on College Hill. He also caught the second and sixth-through-eighth longest passes in Juniata history (good for touchdowns of 94, 73, 63, and 62 yards), and threw a 62-yard TD bomb last season.

Lentini, who wound up seven yards shy of Barry Drexler's record for season receiving, got credit for winning games in the obvious manner, like the 94-yard TD grab which turned back Albright on Homecoming Day. But he also made more subtle major contributions. "As the season progressed," says Nadzak, "Pete kept looming as a bigger and bigger threat. Opponents altered entire game plans, feeling they had to stop Pete to stop Juniata. This enabled us to win games with our other receivers. Yes, Pete's the best big-play receiver we've ever had, even without the ball."

Choir to Feature Music of Jester Hairston In 1975 Tour of Pennsylvania, New York

Juniata College's 62-voice Concert Choir will leave the campus Tuesday, March 4, for its 1975 tour. During the one-week tour, the choir will present 12 concerts in Pennsylvania and New York state.

In its appearances on tour and on the campus this year, the choir is featuring the music of Jester Hairston, internationally known actor and composer-arranger of black folk music and spirituals. Hairston visited Juniata on the weekend of Feb. 14-16, rehearsed with the choir, and served as guest conductor at a concert devoted entirely to his work.

As an actor, Hairston portrayed Leroy, the King Fish's brother-in-law, on the "Amos and Andy" radio and television shows for 15 years. He recently appeared in the film "Lady Sings the Blues," with Diana Ross, and he currently plays the role of Wildcat in ABC-TV's

"That's My Mama."

A graduate of Tufts University, where he majored in music, Hairston also studied at the Juilliard School of Music. For 13 years he was assistant conductor of the then-famous Hall Johnson Choir in New York, conducting and training it and other choral groups for radio and Broadway shows.

In 1936, he moved with the Johnson choir to Hollywood, doing the choral music for films such as "Green Pastures," "Carmen Jones," "Red River," "The Foxes of Harrow," and "Friendly Persuasion."

Among musicians, however, he is probably best known for his arrangements of Afro-American folk songs and spirituals. The Juniata choir will perform his familiar arrangements of Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child, Amen, Hold On! and I Can Tell the World, plus his original compositions Dis Ol' Hammer, Mary, Mary, Where Is Your Baby? and Goodbye Song.

The choir also will sing O Magnum Mysterium (O Wondrous Nativity) by Tomas Luis de Victoria, Cantate Domino Canticum Novum (Sing to God - the Lord) by Buxtehude, Uns ist ein kind geboren (A child is born to us) from Kantata Nr. 142 by Bach, and the Te Deum by Mozart in its tour appearances.

Associate professor of music Bruce A. Hirsch, a member of the faculty since 1965, directs the Juniata choir. Hirsch holds bachelor's and master's degrees from Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N.J., and has taken additional graduate work at the University of Southern California. He has performed or studied with some of the nation's best known conductors, including Leonard Bernstein, Bruno Walter, Eugene Ormandy and Robert Shaw.

The itinerary for the 1975 tour follows:

Tuesday, March 4 — Hollidaysburg (Pa.) Senior High School, 1:40 p.m., and the Carson Valley Church of the Brethren, Duncansville, Pa., 7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, March 5 — Susquehanna Senior High School, Harrisburg, Pa., 1:45 p.m., and the Harrisburg East Mall-Centre Court, 7:45 p.m.

Thursday, March 6 — Annville (Pa.) Junior-Senior High School, 1:15 and 1:55 p.m.; York (Pa.) Church of the Brethren, 8 p.m.

Friday, March 7 — Manheim Township Middle School, Leola, Pa., 10 a.m.; Warwick Senior High School, Lititz, Pa., 1:05 p.m.; Conestoga Church of the Brethren, Bareville, Pa., 7:30 p.m.

Saturday, March 8 — Central Schwenkfelder Church, Worcester, Pa., 8 p.m.

Sunday, March 9 — St. Andrew's Lutheran Church, Yorktown Heights, N.Y., 8 p.m.

Monday, March 10 — Free time in New York City.

Tuesday, March 11 — Return to campus.
